Water is a global challenge

Water is a real and increasing challenge for the global community, with existing challenges being amplified by climate change:

- Human demand for water will exceed supply by 2030.
- Half the population will be water stressed by 2050.
- The biodiversity crisis is most acute in freshwater.
- Economic impacts from water-related climate risks are significant and growing.

Building resilience and managing risk is vital for business, communities and environment. Water Stewardship offers a multi-stakeholder, collaborative basis for addressing shared water challenges.
